CORN BREAD IN EUROPE.

A Special Agent Educating the People in Its Use.

California Wine Rebottled in France and Sent Back to U. S. Labelled as French Products.

WASHINGTON, May 8—Special Agent Murphy, of the agriculture department, leaves in a few days for Europe. He will be accompanied by State Senator Mattus, of Nebraska. For some time past Mr. Murphy has been engaged in an endeavor to introduce Indian corn, or maize, to the people of Europe as food. He has cooked cakes for them, initiated them into the mysteries of "dodger" and made them acquainted with the delights of "egg bread." He had met with fair success, but working unaided could not accomplish all that he hoped. A bureau will be established in London, by which the merits of the corn will be exploited every day in the year. It will be served in all its various forms. There is a special appropriation for the purpose.

California wines are another American product that will be placed in the insular and continental stomachs. Secretary Morton believes that when the people across the water are shown the excellence and cheapness of these growths of this hemisphere they will buy them. Plenty of corn is shipped now, but it is fed only to quadrupeds. American wines are unknown, save to the certain dealers in the fair land of Provence, who buy them, paste French labels upon the bottles, and send them back to us.

COAL COMBINATION.

Stephen B. Elkins and Henry G. Davis in It.

The Ostensible Purpose to Save Operating Expenses—Real Purpose to Raise the Price of Coal.

WHEELING, W. Va., May 8.—At a meeting held at Piedmont, W. Va., all the coal and coke companies in which Henry G. Davis, Stephen B. Elkins and their associates are interested were consolidated. They are the Davis Coal and Coke company, the H. G. Davis Coal company, the Davis & Elkins Coal and Coke company, the Henry Coal and Coke company and the Fairfax Coal and Coke company. Mr. Elkins will be president, Col. Thomas B. Davis, vice president, and Fairfax H. S. Longstreet, general manager. The headquarters will be at New York. The new organization has a capital of $3,000,000. Its mines have an output of 1,000,000 tons a year. The new plan is expected to save about $20,000 a year in the matter of operating expenses and will remove most of the coal operators from the field.

VICTORIOUS REBELS

Establish a Provisional Government in Nicaragua.

NEW YORK, May 8.—The cable from Panama, Colombia, via Galveston, says: With Santiago Morales at its head, the revolutionists of Nicaragua have established a provisional government over that republic, and are preparing to strike a crushing blow to President Sacasa. Headquarters of the provisional government have been established at Granada, the city which first fell into the hands of the revolutionists. Santiago Morales is the provisional president, ex President Joaquin Savala, minister of war, and Eduardo Montei, general in chief of the revolutionary army. Around Granda have been constituted the leading divisions of the revolutionary army, and at that point, of course, all operations are directed. In addition to Granda and Masaga, which they captured on April 29, the revolutionists have taken Rivacs, Jinctehe, Matatlgapa and Chantales. Two battles have been fought near Masaga, in each of which the government forces were defeated. A portion of the Nicaragua railroad, the telegraph lines and the steamers on Lake Managua and Lake Nicaragua are in the possession of the revolutionists. President Sacasa says he has an army of 10,000 and hopes that he will be able to speedily overthrow his enemies.

MRS. CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

Death of the Wife of the Great Railway President.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Mrs. Elise Hegeman Depew, wife of Chauncey M. Depew, died at her home, No. 43 West Fifty-fourth street, at 12.30 yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Depew was a descendant of some of the oldest New York families. Her father was the late William Hegeman, a well known dealer in drugs, who traced his ancestry back to the earliest Dutch settlers in New York. Her mother was a Miss Niven, daughter of Colonel Niven, the once distinguished New York attorney, who himself sprang from an old revolutionary family. Mrs. Depew, whose maiden name was Miss Elise Hegeman, was married to Mr. Depew November 4, 1871. They have one child, Chauncey Depew, jr., who is now fourteen years of age. During the past two years, however, Mrs. Depew has been an invalid. She never entirely recovered from an attack of grip that she had during the epidemic two years ago.

REMARKABLE DUEL.

Two Men Fight With Knives About a Love Affair.

FRESNILLO, Mexico, May 8.—A remarkable duel that resulted in the death of one of the principals and the fatal wounding of the other was fought here Saturday between Jacobo Valdez, a prominent and wealthy young merchant, and Plutarco Margo, an attorney. The cause of the quarrel was a love affair. Knives having blades three inches long were selected as the weapons. A ten foot space was roped off and the men went at each other upon the call of time. They fought desperately in the darkness for twenty minutes, when Margo fell, pierced to the heart with the knife. Both men were horribly mutilated. Valdez fainted from loss of blood and was carried from the field of battle unconscious. His injuries will prove fatal. The seconds have been arrested.

DESERT THE SHIP.

British Sailors Leave the Service of Queen Victoria.

America Presents Many Attractions to Them and They Resolve to Become Our Citizens.

NEW YORK, May 8.—It is learned that the British flagship Blake has lost forty men of her crew up to Saturday last by desertion. The British armored cruiser Australia has lost several men and the two British cruisers Magicienne and Tartar have lost more than twenty men between them. In all the British fleet has lost by desertion more than seventy men since its arrival in this port. From officers of the Blake it is learned that the men who have deserted are for the most part sailors whom the ships could well spare. The United States affords an opportunity to British officers to capture runaways. Once the British sailor reaches shore he is safe from capture. The impression prevails aboard the Blake that a large number of the men who have deserted will try to enlist in the United States navy. The pay of the British sailor is about $12 a month. The pay of the American sailor is $25 a month.

THE WORK OF A CYCLONE

A Swathe Cut Through a Dense Forest.

Trees Picked Up and Piled Six to Eight Feet High and Houses and Barns Swept From Earth.

FULTERTON, Ark., May 8. From J. D. Cantley, who arrived here yesterday from Saratoga, meagre particulars are learned of a disastrous cyclone that swept over a section of country northeast of here Sunday night between 8 and 9 o'clock. The forest trees in a swathe three miles wide have been twisted off, some near the ground and others have been lifted from the roots with the earth adhering to them and piled on one another six and eight deep, making the land over which the storm swept almost impassable. Houses and barns are scattered in all directions and bedding of every description is dangling from the tops of trees. As there is no telegraph communication between this point and Saratoga, which is fourteen miles distant, it is impossible to learn anything regarding the casualties, but it is more than likely considerable destruction of life has resulted.

THE SEVENTH DAY

Of the World's Fair Opens With Bright Sunshine.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS, May 8.—The second week of the world's fair starts off with plenty of sunshine, work going ahead under high pressure and large crowds arriving on the grounds early by rail and steamboat. The gates were closed yesterday, barring out 60,000 people some of whom have returned this morning, to resume their sight seeing which was interrupted Saturday night.

The roadways, under the combined action of the warm sun of yesterday and the steam rollers, were worked to a degree of hardness which now insures good walking in spite of any rain which may come later. Boxes, barrels and other debris which have for a long time disfigured the ground surrounding many of the buildings are being carted away rapidly and the grounds smoothed over and put in presentable condition. By the end of the week the outside appearance of the grounds, excepting that around the smaller buildings, still in process of erection, will present a finished appearance.

Exhibits continue to arrive daily in considerable quantity. Most of these are for display in manufacturers hall and the side tracks leading to that building hold many cars whose contents are easily swallowed up in the cavernous dimensions of the great structures. Columbia avenue, except for the Russian section presents a finished appearance and as the late arrivals of exhibits are taken in at the side doors the visitor does not see the hurry and rush which is attendant upon their unpacking and placing in position.

This morning at 7 o'clock occured the death of Mrs. Margaret Ann Basil at the age of 52 years, of paralysis and catarrh of the throat, at the family residence, 134 Holman street. Mrs. Basil has been an invalid for the past seven years, and the gradual wasting away ended in a peaceful death this morning. She was an exemplary Christian woman and her death will be deeply mourned by a large circle of friends. Mrs. Basil was the widow of the late Martin Basil, who for a number of years was a popular engineer on the Grand Rapids railroad. She leaves three children to mourn her death—Mrs. Ella Compton, Miss Maggie Deibel and Miss Ida Basil. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed, but will probably occur Wednesday.

Fred Kriebaum is selling Wall Paper and Borders lower than any dealer and will give a discount of 10 per cent on all cash sales for the next two weeks. 33 Barr street, opposite new city hall.

HARRIS IS DEAD.

The Fatal Electrical Current Does Its Work.

The Condemned Man Goes to His Death Protesting His Innocence of the Crime of Murder.

SING SING, N. Y., May 8.—Bright spring sunshine did not lighten the gloom that hung over Sing Sing prison this morning. Guards moved about with quiet tread and voices were hushed as in the presence of death. The air of suffocation which one feels at a funeral filled the place in spite of the clear atmosphere of a perfect spring day. At other electrocutions there has been levity and indifference about the prison, but the dawn of Carlyle W. Harris' last day was observed by quiet, due to the appreciation that he was no ordinary culprit, but a man whose crime and whose death will be historic. To-day the crowds began assembling early, and they were larger and of a more intelligent class of people than is usually drawn to the spot. The fact that Harris is really the first man with any pretentions to culture, refinement and intelligence who has taken his place in the electric chair is appreciated. The electrocutions which have preceded the one today were the going to death of brutes who had killed fellow beings and of whose guilt there was no doubt and in whose case there was little to arouse sympathy. Today, for the first time, was a man of a higher order of intelligence to undergo the ordeal. He was a man of education, accustomed to the refinements of good society, educated, a medical student and capable of understanding to an unusual degree what was to happen to him. In addition to all this was the question of the man's guilt. The accused was deprived of none of his legal rights. He had the aid of eminent counsel and from first to last there was but one conclusion from a legal stand point—the man was guilty.

On the other hand he asserted his innocence and has borne himself as an innocent man, under the circumstances. There was an element of doubt in the case and although the tribunals of justice have declared Harris guilty, only he and his Maker know whether his doom was merited or not. Harris made no confession and declared that he had nothing to confess. What doubt has existed will probably remain for all time and the Harris case will be often quoted in arguments against the execution of the death penalty in cases where proof rests upon circumstantial evidence. Contrary to the usual custom here the death warrant was not read by the warden at midnight. The doomed man had been told, however, when the end would come. He retired early last night and though he showed no signs of breaking down he was more nervous and excitable than usual. Principal Keeper Connaughton said this morning that Harris rested well. His self control was marvellous. His only sign of agitation was the constant smoking of cigarettes. He was up early this morning. He looked over the manuscript which he had prepared to be given out to the press by his relatives after the final scene in his dramatic life had ended and the curtain had been rung down.

At 8 o'clock Harris ate a light breakfast. He was cool and collected and appeared to be capable of going through the ordeal which awaited him.

Mrs. Harris, who made her final farewell to him Saturday, remained at the Ambler house shut in from all visitors. Her youngest son, Allan, was with her. She was calm and less nervous than usual and awaited with fearful silence the sign which would inform her that her son, Carlyle, had passed out from this world. The flag announcing the successful conclusion of the execution, which was raised from the roof of the warden's house, could be seen from the windows of the room which Mrs. Harris occupied in the Ambler, and there she and her son, Allan, watched and waited with straining eyes and subdued grief for the fatal signal. Mrs. Harris arose at 1 o'clock and her watch was a long and sorrowful one. She was apparently stronger and better able to bear her grief than she had been for days. At 10 o'clock there was a long string of carriages in front of the prison and hundreds of people were scattered along the hillside. The death warrant was formally read at 8:30 o'clock. He displayed indifference and its reading did not noticeably affect him. Warden Durston said Harris showed no signs of breaking down and appeared cheerful after the reading of the death warrant.

The Rev. John C. S. Wiels, the prison chaplain, went in to see Harris at 9 o'clock this morning and remained for an hour. After he came out Dr. Irving went in and found Harris showing nervousness, but otherwise all right. Harris was shaved and had his hair cut at 11:30. He then put on a new suit of clothes furnished by the state. State Electrician Davis, accompanied by the warden and the witnesses, who had arrived, proceeded to the death room when the final test of the apparatus was made at 11 40 o'clock. At 12 15 o'clock the prisoner was conducted to the chair and 12 37 the fatal current was turned on. Death was instantaneous.

HISTORY OF THE CRIME.

Carlyle W. Harris was born in Glens Falls, N. Y., in September, 1869. He was the grandson of Dr. Benj. W. McCready, of New York city. Carlyle went to work early to earn his own living. He was a book agent, a [illegible] clerk, and for two years an actor, in a "Paul Kauvar" company, thus proceeding a pretty varied career for a young man not yet nineteen years of age. Having decided to be a doctor, he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, going to live with Dr. McCready. He spent the school year of 1888-89 in that college. In the summer of 1889 he went to live at Ocean Grove, N. J.

In August, 1889, a ball was given at the Coleman house, Ocean Grove. At that entertainment Harris formed the acquaintance of Helen Potts. The girl was then eighteen years old. They went boating, played tennis and took long walks along the shore. In the ensuing fall Harris came back to New York to resume his medical studies. The Potts' family moved in New York also, going to live at 116 West Sixty-third street. Helen attended the college of music. Harris continued his calls on her. They became so frequent and Harris' attentions so ardent that the suspicions of Mrs. Potts were aroused. Helen seemed to be fond of Harris.

In February of 1890, on the pretext of taking Helen to see the stock exchange, Harris and Miss Potts went to the city hall and were secretly married by Alderman Bickhoff under assumed names. Six weeks after the marriage Harris' calls on Helen began to be less frequent. He seemed to want to avoid her.

In the latter part of May, 1890, Miss May Schofield came to visit Helen. Harris and Helen were in great trouble for the girl wife was in a delicate condition. Harris proposed a way to avoid letting the world know. She finally consented, but, fearing that it might kill her, she insisted, as a protection to her honor, that Miss Schofield should first know of the secret marriage. Harris took Miss Schofield for a walk on the beach and told her. That afternoon he took Helen out. They were gone till late in the evening. On returning, as she was very pale and sick, Helen went at once to bed. On that afternoon, it was afterwards learned, Harris performed a criminal operation on his wife.

The next week Helen went to Scranton, Pa., to visit her uncle, Dr. Treverton. Seeing that Helen was ill he took her to task. She confessed. Harris was sent for. He confessed that he had performed two operations, but to Dr. Treverton he denied the marriage. After Miss Potts got well her mother insisted that Harris marry her publicly. Harris promised to do so, but urged Mrs. Potts to wait till he had got further in his studies. In the meantime he induced the mother to send Helen to the Comstock boarding school in this city. Mrs. Potts continued to insist on a marriage. On January 20, 1891, Harris wrote her:

"All your wishes shall be complied with, if no other way can be found to satisfy your scruples."

On January 20 Harris got a prescription for six capsules each to contain one-sixth of a grain of morphine and four and a half grains of quinine. He gave Helen four of the pills, telling her to take one each night. He kept two pills. On the evening of Saturday, Jan. 31, 1891, Helen took the last pill and went to bed. When her room mates came in between 11:30 and 12 o'clock they woke her up. She spoke of a choking sensation. She said she could not swallow, and believed she was going to die. Subsequently she awoke her friends with her moans. They gave an alarm. Dr. Fowler, the school physician, came and saw the trouble. He called Dr. Bower to help him. All night they tried to save her life. At 11 o'clock on Sunday morning, February 1, she died. Harris seemed to care little for his wife's death, but feared he would be held responsible. The apparent preparations Harris had made to clear himself of suspicion and previous remarks he made about wishing Helen were dead caused suspicion to fall on him. He refused absolutely to allow Helen to be buried as Mrs. Harris. He told many conflicting stories to her mother, who repeated them to the district attorney. He presented the facts to the grand jury, who indicted Harris on May 15, 1891. He was arrested, brought to trial on January 14, 1892, and the jury three weeks later, brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. Harris was sentenced to be executed during the week beginning March 21, 1892. He took an appeal, but the conviction was unanimously confirmed by the court of appeals. A new trial having been refused by Recorder Smythe, Hon. George Raines, of Rochester, was appointed as commissioner by the governor to hear new testimony on which Recorder Smythe had refused a new trial. Commissioner Raines reported that there was no testimony to show that Miss Potts was a confirmed morphine eater and on this report the governor declined to extend clemency to Harris.

WARD H. LAMON.

President Lincoln's Private Secretary, is Dead.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—News has been received here of the death at Martinsburg, W. Va., of Col. Ward H. Lamon, a few minutes before midnight last night.

Col. Lamon was President Lincoln's private secretary and enjoyed the most confidential relations with the martyred president. He was a man of brilliant attainments and his presence in politics in the stirring days of the civil war gave him a national reputation. He continued to live in Washington long after President Lincoln's death, and here he wrote the greater portion of his life of Lincoln.

DR. MILLER MARRIED.

He Has Fooled His Friends Since October Last.

The Doctor Was United in Marriage to Miss Tillie Neireiter at Lima, Ohio, Last Fall.

The many friends of Dr. J. E. Miller, the efficient health officer of the city of Fort Wayne, will be surprised to learn of his marriage, which occurred at Lima, Ohio, on the 3rd day of October, 1892.

It has been known to THE SENTINEL for several weeks that the doctor was masquerading as a batchelor but it refrained from making the matter public out of consideration to his wishes. The matter was a secret and THE SENTINEL did not propose to break faith with the doctor upon so delicate a subject. It is no longer a secret.

Dr. Miller's bride was Miss Tillie Neireiter, the handsome and accomplished daughter of the late Casper B. Neireiter, of this city, who was at one time engaged in the harness business on Clinton street. She is also the sister of Mrs. William Meyer and is a brunet of possibly twenty-five years.

When THE SENTINEL reporter first accused the doctor of his marriage he vigoriously denied the statement, but finally admitted the truth. The ceremony was performed at the home of a friend in Lima and the clerk at that place, being an old chum of the doctor's, the secret was kept inviolate. Not even the relatives or most intimate friends of the couple knew of the occurrence.

Dr. Miller has made an excellent health officer since chosen for the place. He has been in Fort Wayne for the past six years and has a large and rapidly growing practice. He is a graduate of one of the best medical colleges in Ohio and spent a long time in the hospitals at New York city. He has also traveled extensively over the west.

Dr. Miller will undoubtedly deny this account of his marriage, but he is authority for its truthfulness and the writer holds him in too high esteem to believe him guilty of misleading a friend.

Dr. Miller and his wife have spent the past few days in looking at furniture and will likely occupy a handsome residence on Washington street.

His wife is at present residing with her mother and sister in Lakeside, and the doctor has not been missed from his customary haunts. THE SENTINEL extends congratulations.

JUDGE NIBLACK.

The Great Jurist Dies at Indianapolis.

Heart Troubles, Following an Attack of the Grip, is the Cause of Death.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 8.—Judge William E. Niblack died last evening at 1:45 o'clock, at the family residence, on West North street, in the presence of his wife, two daughters and his son, Mason J. Niblack. The end was not unexpected, and, in fact it was a gradual decline from the day before, when, after months of failing strength, it became evident that death was only a matter of a few hours. The cause of death was heart ailment, following an attack of the grip.

In politics Judge Niblack was always a democrat, though born of a Whig family. His grandfather was a wealthy native of North Carolina, but emigrated to Kentucky to link his fortunes with those of Daniel Boone. This proved unfortunate, and his large possessions wasted away. It was then that the judge's father moved to Dubois county and entered land. His mother was a descendant of the Hargraves, of Virginia. On both sides he traced his ancestry back to the revolution, and he was, at one time, president of the Sons of American Revolution in this city. Judge Niblack was a personal friend of Mr. Blaine, who quotes him frequently in his "Twenty Years in Congress." It is evident that he had the firm respect of Mr Blaine. There was no taint in his loyalty. He served for ten years as the Indiana member of the national democratic committee, leaving it upon his election in 1876 to the supreme bench of the state. As a jurist he had the respect of all persons.

CORNER STONE LAID.

Impressive Ceremonies at St. Peter's Church.

Many Catholic Societies Honor the Occasion—Eloquent Addresses by Rev. Father Brammer and Oechtering.

Amid throngs of people and under the bright sun of a pleasant afternoon in May, the corner stone of St. Peter's Catholic church was placed in position, yesterday, with all the solemnity which befits such an occasion.

By 3 o'clock nearly every Catholic organization in the city had gathered at Library hall and soon afterward a procession, resplendant with rank after rank of finely uniformed knights, hundreds of bright regalias and gorgeous banners, was wending its way south on Calhoun street, accompanied by the City and First Regiment bands. The procession moved in the following order:

Chief marshal John W[illegible] mounted
Marshal [illegible]
Marshal George P. Gordon
Marshal Peter [illegible]
Marshal Valentine Fox
Marshal Peter Harber
City band.
Colonel of battalion J. H. Roberts [illegible]
C. K. of A. [illegible]
Knights of St. John, [illegible]
Emmett commanders, Captain [illegible]
Wayne commandery, Captain [illegible]
Indiana commandery, Captain [illegible]
St. Charles commandery, Captain [illegible]
Councils of the Catholic Benevolent league
Non-uniformed Catholic Knights.
St. Mary's society
Cathedral societies
First Regiment band
Societies of St. Peter's church
Societies of St. Paul's church
Ancient Order of Hibernians, [illegible]

The line of march was south on Calhoun street and east on DeWald to Warsaw. It is estimated that there were nearly 2,000 men in line. St. Patrick's church was represented strongly in the Ancient Order of Hibernians, who made a splendid showing, and in the various other orders.

Several thousand people had gathered about the walls and upon the first floor of the church to witness the laying of the corner stone, which was located on the southwest corner of the church, which faces west on Warsaw street. A temporary stand had also been erected for the accommodation of the speakers.

THE CEREMONY.

The ceremony of laying the stone was impressive. Shortly after 4 o'clock the reverend clergy, composed of Fathers Brammer, Messman, Delaney, Koenig, Oechtering, John Quinlan, William Quinlan, Guendling, Miller, Borg, Eisenring, Father Widau, of New Haven, and Father Korkmas, a visiting missionary, marched from the parochial residence to the church, preceded by twelve acolytes bearing crosses and candlesbra. The procession made the first station at the altar, where a large cross had been erected. Here the spot was blessed after which the procession moved west to the corner stone, which was laid by Father Brammer, assisted by the other priests and the following members of Wayne commandery: Fred Huhn, Fred Link, Henry Huhn, John Nobe and Ben Link. Within the center of the stone was a metal box containing a copy of THE DAILY SENTINEL, other city papers, Columbian coins, current school reports and a parchment containing a brief sketch of the founding of the edifice and giving the names of the present reigning pontiff, president of the United States, all the state and local officers, acting bishop and other clergy. This having been accomplished the procession marched outside the walls and made a circuit of the building, blessing each corner in turn. Returning they again marched within the walls and took positions upon the temporary platform. After the Harmonica Glee club had sung an appropriate song Rt. Rev. Father Brammer arose and addressed the vast crowd assembled.

FATHER BRAMMER'S ADDRESS.

Father Brammer chose for his text a passage from the gospel of St. Matthew, chapter 16, beginning at the 13th verse. Upon the 18th verse of this chapter, which may appropriately be likened to one of the corner stones of Catholic faith, Father Brammer laid particular stress. "And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." "This passage," said the Rev. Father, "contains the very element and essence of the Catholic faith—a faith which contains all the requirements necessary for the happiness and salvation of man. When God consummated the creation of the world by creating man in his own immage and likeness he placed him in the Garden of Eden and caused him to be surrounded by everything which would minister to his wants and make him as completely happy as a finite being could be. But man fell from grace, became an enemy of God and was expelled from the garden. But God, in the Lord Jesus, did not forsake man as he had the fallen angels. He sent his only son the Savior, to redeem the world. In order to accomplish the redemption of the millions of the human race it was necessary to establish a faith and it was thus that the Catholic church had birth. Jesus, speaking to Peter, his tried and faithful apostle, said, 'Thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. [illegible] am with you all days, even to the end of the world.' His promise to the church has never failed. It is to-day what it was then despite the attacks of the world and the devil. It has stood the test of ages. It is the mother of all the churches [illegible] assertion? Who can count all these precious souls who for the first 300 years of the establishment of the faith laid down their lives in martyrdom? What other church of modern establishment can point to such a glorious history? One nation, of all the world, has set a shining example of firmness in faith and that nation is Ireland."

Father Brammer was followed by Father Oechtering, who spoke in German, taking for his text a passage from the first book of Peter, second chapter and sixth verse. His sermon was classical and eloquent.

After the ceremony was concluded the procession again formed and marched east on DeWald street to Hanna, north on Hanna to Washington, west on Washington to Calhoun and thence to Library hall, where they disbanded.

CHURCH HISTORY.

St. Peter's congregation was first started in 1872 by about two dozen families living in the southeastern part of the city, south of the Pennsylvania and Wabash railway tracks. Property was secured on the corner of Hanna and St. Martin streets, a location, by the way, which is a very choice one. It was at first intended to erect a wooden structure, but the late Bishop Dwenger had the plans changed and the present church and school building was erected, which has served the double purpose ever since. The first pastor was the late Rev. John Wenhoff, who was called from Decatur, Ind., by the ordinary. The Rev. Father Wenehoff served the congregation faithfully until his demise in December, 1880. There were serving as teachers of the school three laymen until September, 1881, when sisters of Notre Dame from Milwaukee took charge and have ever since faithfully attended the children as instructors. Father Wenehoff was succeeded by the present pastor, Rev. Father Messman, who was called from Kentland, Ind., on December 16, 1880. The congregation owns altogether eight lots, or one square of ground, situated between Warsaw and Hanna and St. Martin and DeWald streets. Among the last four acquired by the congregation one was owned by the late Rev. Father Wenehoff and is now occupied by the pastorial residence. The three lots upon which the new church is now being erected were purchased from John Mohr, jr., by the late bishop. The total value of the real estate owned by the congregation is about $25,000, and the value of the buildings, independent of the new church, is about $10,000. The growth of St. Peter's congregation has been slow but steady. It now numbers over 250 families. The four sisters in charge of the school have 275 children under their direction.

THE NEW EDIFICE.

The new church edifice, the corner stone of which was laid yesterday, will be, when completed, one of the very finest pieces of church property in the city of Fort Wayne. It will owe its existence to the untiring zeal and energy of Rev. Father Messman, who early realized the necessity of such a building as the congregation increased in membership. Five years ago a building association was formed by members of the church, who paid a small sum monthly and, who were enabled by this and other means to create a building fund of $20,000, enough to warrant the beginning of the erection of the new edifice.

The architect of the new church is Peter Diederich, jr., of Detroit, who began work upon the plans last May. In September of the same year the contract was let to John Suelzer, of this city. The contract price was $53,191, which includes only the bare edifice, plastered, the windows, pews and ornamentations, which will cost many thousands of dollars, will all be extra. Actual work was begun on the new building on the 20th day of last September and at present the walls have been built up to a height of some seven or eight feet. In architectural design St. Peter's church will be superb. It will be built of brick and stone and will be surmounted with a steeple 207 feet in height. The seating capacity will be 1,000. The dimensions are as follows: Length, 181 feet; width, seventy-two feet, height of side walls, forty-two feet, height to apex of roof, fifty-eight feet; width of transcept, eighty-six feet. The contract calls for the completion of the building by September, 1894.

FATHER MESSMAN.

Rev. Father Messman was born at Steinfield, Germany and came to this country with his father at the age of nineteen, his mother being dead. His father located in the city of Cincinnati, and his son, early showing a disposition for study and an inclination towards holy orders, was sent to the Jesuit's school. Here he remained four years and then attended school at Notre Dame college near South Bend. Here he remained there one year, and returning to Cincinnati entered the college of St. Mary's of the West, graduating about the same time with Father Brammer. Father Messman was ordained by the late Bishop John H. Luers at St. John's church, Cincinnati, on the 6th day of January, 1870. His first mission was at Logansport, where he remained only three months, and was sent to Kentland, Ind., where he had charge of St. Joseph's church until December, 1880, when he came to this city to take charge of St. Peter's congregation. Father Messman, an eloquent, polished orator and beloved by all who know him, is the [illegible] of his congregation.

POISONED HORSES.

Tom Wilkinson Does a Clever Piece of Detective Work.

The Baxter Brothers, of Monroe Township Arrested on a Very Serious Charge.

Ex-Deputy Sheriff Tom Wilkinson comes to the front today with a clever piece of detective work in which he has covered himself all over with glory and demonstrated his ability as a detective of the first class.

The readers of THE SENTINEL will remember, for the facts were narrated in these columns, that one morning several weeks ago Theodore Beatty, of Monroe township, found his fine $1,200 stallion dead on the stable floor of his barn, the animal having been poisoned by someone.

Nothing was done or said about the matter at that time and Mr. Beatty went to Wabash and purchased of the Wabash Importing company two other as valuable stallions as were ever brought into Allen county and took them to his farm. The animals were probably worth $2,500. In less than two weeks they were found one morning in his stables lying dead on the floor.

The affair caused intense excitement in Monroe township. Dr. Myers, the veterinary surgeon of this city, was called and went to Monroeville to make a post mortem examination of the bodies of the animals. He took out their stomachs, brought them to this city, and an analysis disclosed the fact that the horses had been poisoned, strychnine being found in their stomachs.

Before the postmortem examination was held Tom Wilkinson was employed to work up the case, and when the true cause of the death of the horses was made known, he went to Monroe township and commenced the task of ferreting out the guilty parties, working night and day on the case.

After looking over the field and examining all the circumstances, Tom made up his mind that D. J. Baxter and Frank Baxter, two brothers, who were rivals of Beatty in the horse breeding business, were concerned in the matter and he at once began the work of hunting up the evidence against them.

The result was that last Saturday night Beatty came to this city and filed affidavits with Justice Ryan charging D. J. Baxter and Frank Baxter with having committed the deed. Warrants for their arrest were placed in the hands of Tom Wilkinson and, with Ex-Sheriff Viberg, he went to Monroeville, arrested the parties and brought them to this city.

They were taken before Justice Ryan this afternoon and a preliminary hearing of the cases postponed until several important witnesses from Adams county and other places could be summoned and secured. Both prisoners gave bond, in the sum of $2,000 each, for their appearance.

The cases have excited an intense interest in Monroe township, as all the parties are well known. Tom Wilkinson, who ferreted out the affair, is no stranger to Fort Wayne people. He will be remembered as one of the brave officers who figured so prominently in the fight and capture of the desperado, Marvin Kuhns, and as an officer who, during his long career as deputy sheriff of this county, won praise for his faithful service and clever detective work.

THE Chicago papers are howling mad because the gates of the world's fair had to be closed yesterday. Let them howl

THE Philadelphia Centennial exposition registered 9,900,000 gate admissions, and the receipts were $3,813,723. Chicago will largely surpass these figures.

ONE Memphis editor has denounced another editor "over his own signature" as a "willful and malicious liar." It is sweet to live in a town where the newspaper men are thirsting for each other's gore.

GOVERNOR MCKINLEY, of Ohio, says that the confidence of the people in President Cleveland, irrespective of party affiliations, is too great to admit of a panic. You are right governor. As predicted, the so called panic among the Wall street stock gamblers has resulted in no injury to any body except the stock gamblers themselves.

TEXAS, the land of mighty things, comes to the front with a murder story in which it is charged that 243 men have been killed to destroy the evidence of just one killing. If the outlaw bands had kept up their work a few years more they would have been compelled to depopulate the whole state to round out their undertaking.

The Chinese Exclusion Law.

A matter of considerable importance to the nation came up in the United States courts of New York Saturday. It was an action brought to test the constitutionality of the Geary law which requires that all Chinamen in this country must register their names with the revenue collector of the district in which they reside and take out certificates showing their right to be within the limits of the United States on the 5th day of May, 1893, and if this was not done that those refusing were to be excluded from the country.

Very few Chinamen have complied with the requirements. As mentioned in THE SENTINEL several days ago the Chinese of this city, acting under the counsel of their attorney, Mr. Ben F. Harper, had refused to register, as did also the Chinese in many of the other cities of the country. There were no arrests made here or in many of the other cities because Secretary Carlisle had ordered a suspension of the provisions temporarily, or until the constitutionality of the law could be passed upon by the supreme court of the United States. The plan was that the cases at New York should be test cases and that they would be taken to the United States supreme court. The disposition of the New York cases are thus told by THE SENTINEL'S United Press dispatches of Saturday evening.

"Three actions were brought in the United States district court to test the constitutionality of the Geary law compelling Chinese to register. Marshal Jacobus arrested the first three Chinamen without certificates who came in his way. The three men were Lee Yo, Wong Quan and Fon Yung Ting. The Chinamen were admitted to bail in $500 each, which was procured by representatives of the six companies. The cases, the district attorney said, will be heard by the supreme court in Washington next Wednesday. The proceedings were closely watched by Yung Kai, a member of the Chinese legation at Washington, and by Vice Consul Wing, of this city."

It will be insisted by the attorneys for the Chinese that deportation for refusal to register is a "cruel and unusual punishment" within the prohibition of the eighth amendment to the constitution. The government will urge that the requirement of registration is no hardship and that congress has a right to provide for the punishment of aliens who defy an enactment which they have had a year to comply with. It will be contended that the requirement of registration imposes no greater hardship than the registration laws of the states for political elections.

Abnormal Appetites.

From the stomach of a patient who recently died at the Michigan asylum for the insane, at Kalamazoo, there were taken seventy-five stones, thirty-eight nails, from one and one-half to five and one-half inches long; fifteen staples, two screws, two buttons, one piece of glass, several pieces of barbed wire, besides dirt and gravel, the whole weighing twenty-one ounces. The patient lived a long time after commencing this diet, but a long nail finally perforated his stomach and killed him. James Tobin, living near Crawfordsville, Ind., was confined to the house last summer afflicted with a stomach trouble that almost baffled medical skill. It was found that no food except ice cream could be retained long enough to be digested. So, since July 14, he has eaten nothing but ice cream. On that day he weighed one hundred and forty pounds, and now he tips the beam at two hundred and ten, and works early and late. A gallon of rich ice cream is frozen every morning and is sufficient for the day. Tobin can take other kinds of food now, but has suffered so much from indigestion that he thinks it best to leave well enough alone and not worry about the monotony in his meals.

The Grog-Shop in Politics.

The Cincinnati Tribune of a recent date has the following significant editorial note: "The spectacle of a man elected to represent a constituency of three hundred thousand persons in the Ohio legislature, beastly drunk and making a disgraceful outbreak in a prominent hotel at the capital of the state at four o'clock in the morning, is not calculated to make us proud of our chosen representative. Yet that is an object which the citizens of this county were called on to contemplate during the past week. Is it any wonder that we are misrepresented?" But what else can be expected while some of the chief agencies and centers of political influence are the barrooms? The road to political preferment in many of our cities, sad to say, lies through the grog-shop.

IT is rumored that a tall building is to be erected in Chicago in which there shall not be a stone, brick or piece of timber. It is to be constructed of an alloy of aluminum and copper—ninety per cent. of the former and ten per cent. of the latter—in the form of sheets over a wall of steel framed fireproofing. To a larger extent than is usual in such structures glass will be used, the windows being twenty two feet wide. The structure, composed entirely of plate glass and shining pieces of aluminum, will, it is asserted, be as striking in appearance as it will be novel. The cost is estimated at seven hundred thousand dollars.

A BUSINESS man from Cincinnati tells of the harsh means he adopted to secure peace in his neighborhood. The place was afflicted by a young man who practiced on the piano—he practiced loud and long, with the windows open—and the people writhed and groaned and cursed to no effect. The business man, who lived next door to the pianist, hired a hand organ by the day, with a boy to go along with it, and the boy's instructions were that he should play at an open window, striking up as soon as his employer had gone to his office and letting up as soon as he got home. At the end of the second day the pianist moved

THE founder of a certain club in New York city, now an old man, whose thoughts turn to the inevitable dissolution of body and soul, has, according to the Sun of that city, exacted a sacred promise from the members of the organization that when he dies his body shall be cremated and the ashes placed in the center of the table at the club's annual dinner. "I want you to regard my presence as a joke," he said "be merry over what is left of me. Drink my health, wish me joy, and have a good time generally. I shall be with you in my other manifestations to see that my request is granted."

THE number of wires which have to enter and leave a large telephone exchange has become so great that it is necessary to bundle them together into cables and to carry them in a conduit underground, bringing the outer terminals of the cables from the conduit to some central point from which the wires may be distributed to the several subscribers. These cables contain from fifty to one hundred pairs of wires, each wire carefully insulated by cotton or paper from every other and each pair of wires forming a circuit, carefully twisted so as to maintain the neutrality to the other circuits.

DURING the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, the total number of persons who sailed from the United States for foreign ports was 236,956, of whom 103,152 were cabin passengers. When it is remembered how liberal American tourists are in their expenditures, it is not an exaggerated estimate to say that these cabin passengers carry out of the country and leave in Europe a hundred million of dollars.

THE colored journalists of Virginia have organized a society that will be known as the Negro Press association. Their object will be to educate the colored people of the state and to wait upon the governors of the southern states, who are to assemble in Richmond some time this month, to petition them to use their influence against lynch law in the south.

AT THE WORLD'S FAIR

PEN PICTURES OF SOME OF THE NOTABLE EXHIBITS.

The Wolverine State Making an Attempt to Eclipse Her Sisters—Lot's Wife Done in Salt—Michigan Expects Much.

THE MICHIGAN exhibit at the World's Fair is among the most interesting. The State building, a picture of which accompanies this article, was erected at a cost of $60,000. In addition to the building Michigan will have a logging camp on exhibition, displaying the workings of one of the chief industries of the Wolverine State. The State building is 101x144 feet in ground dimensions, and three stories high, with a tower containing two stories more. It is surrounded on three sides by an elevated piazza twelve feet wide, and fronts to the north and west. The first floor contains the offices, men's reception and club rooms, a ladies' parlor, reading and reclining rooms, toilet and check rooms; also a barber shop, cigar and news stand, a post-office, bureau of information, where every Michigan visitor is expected to register, giving both his home and Chicago addresses. The general reception room is being finished and will be furnished by Saginaw County at an expense of $4,000, and Muskegon County is doing the same thing with the club-room, spending $3,000. The ladies' parlor and reading-room have been decorated and furnished by the leading society women of Grand Rapids at a cost of $4,000. The main corridor, 50 feet long and 40 feet wide, has a large fireplace at one side, around which is placed a $1,000 mantel furnished by the Widdicomb Mantel Company of Grand Rapids. There will also be fireplaces in the ladies' parlor and the Saginaw and Muskegon rooms. The floors of the corridor and hallways are made of Michigan tile, all the wood used in the building came from Michigan, and most of the construction work was done by Michigan workmen. The interior finish of the first and second stories is in Michigan red oak.

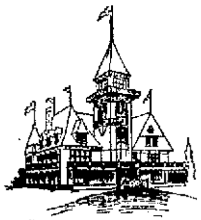
When passing up the broad stairway leading to the second floor the visitor will be confronted at a half-way landing by an elegant marble bust of Gen. Cass. On the second floor will be found a newspaper exhibit in a large room fitted and furnished with chairs, tables, and other conveniences for the comfort and convenience of newspaper people. The exhibit will contain the last copy of every paper in the State printed prior to May 1, as well as subsequent copies of every paper giving an account of the opening of the fair. On this floor is also a large assembly-room furnished with a pipe organ by Farrand & Votey of Detroit. Here will be held the meetings, social gatherings, and banquets; and there is also a room for State exhibits, 40x70, in which the university at Ann Arbor is making a natural history display, and where exhibits from the various State institutions will be made in glass cases. A prospective map of the State, 12x14 feet in size and costing $16,000 is a feature of the show.

The third floor will be devoted to sleeping rooms. The tower carries an illuminated clock having a six-foot dial.

In the Mineral Department Mines Building a Michigan exhibit will be displayed in a pavillion made of stone, iron ore, copper, crystalized salt, silver, gold, granite, marble, verde antique, and other specimens of mineral taken from the quarries and mines of Michigan. One of the unique attractions inside this pavillion will be a biblical representation of Lot's wife turned to a pillar of salt. There will also be a specimen of copper ore as it comes out of the mine, 98 per cent pure and weighing 10,000 pounds. The cost of this pavillion is estimated at $20,000. It will stand in the center of the building opposite Germany and England, and was constructed under the supervision of Peter White, member of the board for Marquette, and Jay A. Hubbell of Houghton.

In the Agricultural Building Michigan has erected another fine booth on 2,000 square feet of space, in the center of which stands a Corinthian temple surrounded by a shield with the coat of arms of the State. The booth is filled with the choicest collection of grains, grasses, and other products of the farms of the Wolverine State. In this collection the State Agricultural College is represented by a fine display. Vice-President E. H. Belding is in charge of this part of the show.

At the Centennial Michigan captured the medal for the best show of fruit, but the exhibit made there will be nothing in comparison with the one that will be made at Jackson Park this year. The State will have in Horticultural Hall a large and varied display of winter apples, pears, canned fruits, jams, and jellies that are being kept in cold storage. There will also be a show of wax models of every variety of fruits, berries, and vegetables raised in the State. During the summer months additional space will be devoted to exhibitions of all kinds of new fruit, each specimen in its season. Arrangements have been made to bring the shipments by boat across the lake and have them arrive fresh every morning. This no other State can do. As a result Michigan expects to tempt the mouths of visitors with the most luscious berries, cherries, peaches, pears, plums, and apples that ever grew.



THE MICHIGAN STATE BUILDING.

In forestry the exhibit contains seventy-six varieties of wood and the different uses to which they may be put, and there are specimens in the rough as well as in the various stages of manufacture. A fine pavillion has been erected for this exhibit in the Forestry Building.

In addition the State has an outdoor space just south of Machinery Hall and near the sawmill, where has been constructed a genuine lodging camp seventy feet long and twenty feet wide. It has been the exact reproduction of the camps Michigan lumbermen live in, and the daily bill of fare, cornbread, pork, and beans, strong black coffee, etc., is the same as they have in the woods. Besides the camp there is in the show the largest load of logs ever put on sleigh and drawn by a single span of horses. It contains 36,000 feet of lumber, weighs 145 tons, and was drawn a quarter of a mile down grade by a pair of horses whose combined weight is 4,000 pounds. It required nine flat cars to bring these logs to Chicago. They were cut and sent by Nester Bros. of Baraga, on the Sturgeon River. It was necessary to have eight car loads for the camp. There was a sleigh load of logs half the size of this one at the Centennial.

BIG LOAD OF LOGS FOR THE MICHIGAN EXHIBIT.

It attracted a great deal of attention. This one is expected to create a sensation. Near the camp will be a log train of five cars and all about the place specimens of the tools used by lumbermen from the opening of the first camp in Michigan down to the present time.

A Claimant of an Immense Fortune.

The Bessarabian News publishes the following extraordinary story of an immense fortune shortly to be claimed from the Bank of England. According to this circumstantial statement, the widow of a rich English Jew, Ovsky Levi, deposited her capital in the year 1803. This capital, with its interest, now amounts to 600,000,000 roubles, or £60,000,000. The News says that numerous claimants have from time to time appeared, but only one, an American lady, Miss Bumeric, succeeded lately in proving her title to one forty-fifth part, the whole of the remainder going to a Russian subject, Anna Finkelstein, nee Levi, the wife of a jeweler at Ismail, at the mouth of the Danube. According to the News she has only to produce certificates of the birth of her father and his uncle, through whom she is the direct heiress. These certificates are stated to be easily procurable from Furth, in Bavaria. The fortunate Anna Finkelstein is of middle age and childless.

Paid His Forfeit.

About a year or so ago the Grand Duke Michael of Russia was visiting Paris, and chanced to dine in the company of Rosa Bonheur, the great animal painter. They got on very well, and at dessert they ate a "Philopena" together—that is to say, they shared a double almond. But the Duke, when next day they met, forgot to say "Philopena," and lost the bet. He asked the artist what present he should give her, and she replied, laughingly: "Any animal that would do to paint; something pretty, you know."

The Duke smiled and departed. Nothing more was heard of him, and the lady had quite forgotten the whole affair, when some months afterward, the royal forfeit arrived—to-wit, three enormous Polar bears.

A New Dancing Grip.

The Philadelphians are astonishing the people in general by exhibiting their latest fad in the way of dancing. It is known as the "crab-claw grip," and is most suitable for the waltz. The gentleman places his right arm around his partner, putting his hand as high as possible between her shoulders. She elevates her left arm until it is at right angles with her body and bends her arm until her fingers rest on her shoulder instead of her partner's arm. With his left hand he takes hold of her right wrist, her right arm being in a similar position to her left, and holds it nearly under her chin with her hand flapping. After this position has been secured they proceed, in true Philadelphia style, to dance without any regard to the musicians.

A Novel Match.

Two well-known Paris fencers—MM. Rose and Chevillard—have arranged a novel kind of match. The champions will run a race of 100 kilometers—sixty-two miles—on bicyclettes, after which both fencers will jump from their machines and see whether their ride has impaired the cunning of their wrists. Foils will be handed to the two athletes immediately after the velocipede race has been run, and a fencing match commenced.

Lobster Laws.

Lobsters enjoy a special section of a statute to themselves. To have in possession, to sell, or attempt to sell, to expose or consign for sale any lobster which measures less than eight inches from the tip of the beak to the end of the tail, when spread as far as possible flat, is an offense punishable with a fine of £3 in the first instance, £10 for every subsequent one.

For Old Maids.

There has been started in Denmark an Old Maids' Insurance Company. Spinsters can insure themselves by a small sum on reaching the age of thirteen, and if still unmarried at forty are entitled to a regular allowance. If they marry, however, they forfeit all claim.

Arm and Hammer Coffee is the best. 24-eod-2m.

Here is Something Good for Your Rheumatic Friends.

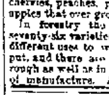
If any of your friends are troubled with rheumatism have them read this:

LYNCHBURG, VA., April 18, 1893.

I desire to say that Chamberlain's Pain Balm has cured one of our citizens of rheumatism of two years standing. One bottle did the work. This gentleman, Mr. R. H. Farnell, ticket agent of the C. & O. R. R., now recommends. F. C. Helbig. 50 cent bottles for sale by druggists.

Mothers, Be sure and use "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for your children while cutting teeth. It is the best remedy of all. May1eodwly

Have you tried Arm and Hammer Coffee. 24-eod-2m.



All alone, both in the way it acts, and in the way it's sold, is Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription for women.

It acts in this way:

If you're weak or "run-down," it builds you up; if you suffer from any of the painful disorders and derangements peculiar to your sex, it relieves and cures. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores flesh and strength. For all functional weaknesses and irregularities, it's a positive remedy. Hence, it's sold in this way:

It's guaranteed to give satisfaction, in every case, or the money paid for it is refunded.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets prevent and cure Sick and Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. They're the smallest, the cheapest, the easiest to take.

But all that would be nothing, if they weren't also the best to take.

THE GOLDEN EXCEPTION.

She lifts back the window curtain,
He closes the gate below
She smiles—a coquette I am certain;
His eyes take a tender glow
Will it be this way after marriage?
Will they play at sweethearts through life?
Listen, you who true love disparage
They have flirted for years—that's his wife.
—New England Magazine.

A FLASH IN THE PAN.

It takes a tough man t' stand it when you Texas fellers drop a task an' strike an all-day gait. Y' think that because a man's punched cows in th' North he don't know an "apple-horn" from a "Visalia," or a "rope" from a "lass'," or either of 'em from a "mecarte." I s'pose, now, y'd look at me red-eyed ef I was t' tell y' that I've done as much twinin' aroungst th' chaparral as I have on top o' th' bunchgrass, an' flopped my lip over th' chuck in a greaser's adobe as often as I've pounded my ear in a Montana shack.

Now jest s'pose a man—not me, but another feller—t' be peaceably shackin' along on his mustang over one o' them big mesas down there when out from th' gates o' a hacienda he was passin' rode a beautiful creature, not sixteen—they ripen early down there—with black hair, languishin' eyes, an' a figger t' set fire t' th' heart o' any vaquero that ever coiled a rope, an' dashin' up t' Bill Snooks turned loose her pleadin' dark eyes on him, an' said:

"Does th' caballero ride t' th' rancho of Senor th' Intendant o' th' herds o' th' Blazin' Brazos?"

"Good Lord!" said Bill Snooks to himself, "this lays over me." But t' her he said in his softest voice, a good deal spoiled by pretty steady "singin' to 'em" for a number o' years:

"Si, senorita; y' can bet yer sweet life he does."

"An' will he charge himself with this, to me, letter o' life an' death, an' deliver it safely into the hand of one Don Henrico Martinez at that ranch o?"

"That little cuss, Hen Martin, for th' whisky! George, what luck some men do have!" said Snooks ag'in to himself. But, bein' short on Spanish, he had t' git off pretty much th' same old gag t' her.

"Si, senorita; y' can bank on Hen—on Don Henrico's gettin' it all right."

"An' I shall t' th' Senor Caballero my thanks o' th' most deep, an' prayers t' th' Holy Mother of Heaven!" with which polite remark th' lady wheeled her horse an' vamosed as sudden as she come.

Martin was a man o' simple habits, an' easy t' find. He was stretched in a hammock under a big cottonwood, with a cigarette in his mouth, a dirty French novel in his hand and a whisky cocktail close by. He was a handsome little cuss, born and bred in Boston, where most o' th' company stockholders lived, and though his services wasn't very valuable it was understood t' be worth all it cost to his friends t' keep him safely cached 3,000 miles away from home.

Snooks havin' delivered th' letter, Martin chucked away his cigarette and perceded t' read it, not noticin' that Bill was still standin' there. Now, as I told y' Bill's affections had taken such a strong delawolt around th' lovely senorita that not havin' much fear o' Hen Martin before his eyes he jest naturally stayed there t' see what 'd happen; an' in about a minute Martin jumped up, an' pitchin' his novel after his cigarette yelled out: "Oh, Lord, what a fix! What an infernal fix!"

"What's up?" said Bill. There bein' nobody else there he took th' view that Martin must a spoke t' him.

"Up!" said Martin, lookin' at Bill sort o' wild like. "Everything's up! I'm up, up a tree! Look here, Bill, y' saw that girl that sent me th' letter? We're in love, Bill; madly in love! An' at last she's consented t' go off with me. Listen. 'One so adored!' Bother, that's not it. Um, um, here you are:

"Meet you on foot, at 9 to-night, by th' broken cross where th' roads meet, an' fly—t' be parted, never!"

"Well," says Bill, "what's th' matter with that? You'll fly, o' course, an' everything'll be lovely."

"Oh, Bill, I can't? I haven't got any money! I'm dead broke, strapped, clean busted! I got my quarter's pay on Friday, an' 'Willy th' Kid' an' 'Black Joe' cleaned me out at draw before night. Oh, curse th' luck! Bill, what shall I do? I love her so! An' she'll die with shame an' disappointment, for she loves me just as hard. Oh, Bill! Bill!"

"How much 'd it take?" said Bill.

"About five hundred. Just th' lot I dropped at those cursed cards. Enough t' go North an' live on till we can bully her uncle out o' some more. She's an orphan an' rich. If we was once married he couldn't keep her out o' it long."

"I'll lend it to y'," said Bill.

Martin pulled himself up an' glared at th' other with a blink o' manly spirit in his eye. "I didn't suppose you'd go t' baitin' me now, Bill," said he.

"Baitin', be blowed!" said Bill. "I'll give y' a square check on the stockman's bank in Dallas for 500 good states dollars."

Martin looked hard at him. "Bill," said he, "d' y' mean it?"

"Sure," said Bill Snooks.

"Where'd y' git it?"

"Saved it up. Meant t' quit punchin' an' go in for sheep on my own hook."

"An' now y' offer t' lend it t' me?"

"On th' dead straight," said Bill.

"An' give up yer sheep? Five hundred in sheep'll make a man o' y' in a few years, Bill. A feller like you that can work."

"Ye-e-s! I s'pose it would. But what's th' odds, 'long 's y' 're happy? As she's happy, that is. Take th' money, Martin, an' go along. Sheep-ranchin' 'ill last, I reckon. Y' can pay me, y' know."

"Pay y'! Why, Bill, ye shall have a hacienda stocked with full-blooded merinos. Oh! Y' shall be paid—in money! but th' kindness of it! Well, it's no use t' talk, Bill; but I shan't forget it. An' now, if y' do mean it, Bill, I must hustle! I've got t' fix up some little things here, and hunt up a horse that'll carry her.

"That's so," said Bill. "How'd her letter said 'on foot,' didn't it? Y'd better take Cringo."

"Bill! Your little racer, that y' set so much by."

"Well, I don't spose y' want t' put her on no bench-legged plug, that'll lope all day in th' shade o' a cottonwood tree. An' now, Martin, look here; you'll want somethin' t' go on, here's a dozen greaser dollars for change. I'll give y' a check for th' five hundred, so y' can git it in Dallas, or y' can tell th' old man that y' won it off o' me, an' he'll cash it for y', he knows it's all right, an' then I'll ride over t' Las Cases an' hunt up a woman's saddle, an' there I'll feed an' rub down Cringo, an' have him at the crossroads, as fresh as paint, at five minutes before 9. O' course you'll be waitin' for me there, an' when she comes, an' is once up, there ain't a horse in th' country that Cringo can't show a clean pair o' heels to."

At the time set Bill Snooks rode his racin' mustang, "Cringo," slowly down the trail from Las Cases toward th' broken cross where th' roads met. Ther was a touch o' sorrow in his heart, fer Bill loved th' little mustang better'n anything else 'n th' world—except th' lady o' th' hacienda; but he hadn't long t' think about it before a little veiled figger came creepin' down th' trail, an' a soft voice whispered: "Thou art waitin' for thy so late Ninita, but my uncle——." Here Bill was obliged t' explain th' situation, an', cursin' Martin under his breath for a cowardly sneak t' make th' flutterin' little creature wait, he begged her as politely as he knew how t' mount th' bay horse, an' th' Senor Martinez would be with them in a'most no time.

"Ah! he has sent you with a horse; so kind, so thoughtful!" as, touchin' her little arched foot t' Bill Snooks' big brown hand, she sprang t' th' saddle. "But listen! I hear th' tramplin' o' horses. It must be he, yet they seem many. Senor Caballero, if there be danger I look to' you for protection!"

"With my life, senorita!" said Bill. Addin' to himself "for God's sake, Bill Snooks, keep yer gun in yer belt, an' yer mouth shut, till y' see what'll do her th' least harm!"

By this time th' clatter o' hoofs had stopped, an' plumb in front o' Bill an' th' senorita pulled up Don Juan Felipe Aguado, th' uncle an' gardeen o' th' lady; an' Mr. Warren Maitland—usually known among th' boys as "th' old man"—th' manager o' th' Blazin' Brazos cattle company.

"The Senorita Ninita, hero!" cried Don Juan, almost knocked out o' his saddle by th' shock.

"Bill Snooks, you here!" put in old Maitland in a voice like the bleat o' a bull-calf under the brandin'iron.

"What does this mean, senorita?" thundered Don Juan.

"An' what in——! What on earth are you up to, Bill?" yelled Maitland in the same breath.

"If my uncle will listen," said the senorita, at last.

Bill hed bin dumb, not knowin' in th' least what line she meant t' take, an' feelin' sure he'd only put his foot in it if he tried t' talk. "If my uncle and the Senor Maitland will listen, it means that I am about t' become th' wife of a caballero so noble, so brave an' honorable, that my family can but feel gratified by the alliance. I speak of th' Senor Don Henrico Martinez, who will on th' moment arrive t' claim me for his bride."

"But if this be true," said th' Don, "how comes it that I find you here with this common vaquero, an' mounted upon his horse—which I recognize as from th' track o' th' race?"

"Don Juan," put in old Maitland, "My nephew, Mr. Martin, would, I have no doubt, feel flattered at th' idea of an alliance with th' family o' th' Senor Aguado; but I am in a position to state with certainty that he has not at this time anticipated or prepared for th' honor. I left him at th' rancho, somewhat overcome—indeed, I will not hesitate t' speak plainly—dead drunk—having spent th' afternoon at cards an' lost heavily a sum received in payment of an old gambling debt. I need not say that it gives me pain t' speak o' these habits, so degradin' t' my young relative—but better so than t' believe him capable o' attemptin' th' abduction o' a child—for y'r niece is little more.

"As for you Snooks, I won't allow myself t' use harsh language in th' presence of a lady. Here's a month's wages; yer bounced from th' pay-roll o' th' company, an' I know my friend th' Senor Aguado will join me in sayin' that th' faster y' make tracks from this part o' th' country th' better.

"Don Juan will no doubt escort his niece home. You can mount yer own horse, as neither his people nor mine will be likely t' feel very friendly if this gets out, better fan him a little on both sides till y' git over th' line."

What became o' th' senorita? Quien sabe. If it hed o' bin Bill Snooks that she was willin' to run off with, things would hav ended different. As it was, Bill was scooped. He traveled North by long stages, joined a cattle drive at Abilene an' never stopped till th' snowies was below him an' th' Canada line sigh in sight.—San Francisco Examiner.

FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT.

A Runaway Train Causes the Loss of Ten Lives.

Accidents, Incidents and Personal Mention of the People About the Railway Centers.

A frightful accident occurred at the Big Four depot in Lafayette, Ind., yesterday morning, at 2 o'clock. Ten men were killed outright and a dozen were more or less severely injured. The list is as follows:

KILLED.

Engineer Michael Walsh, of Indianapolis, found underneath his engine. His head was split open and his body was terribly mangled.

Sterling McInnis, Urbana, Ill., fireman.

Thomas McMahon, Bellevue, Ohio.

A. P. Chadwick, postal clerk, Shelbyville, Ind.

Jesse H. Long, postal clerk, Lebanon, Ind.

E. B. Myers, postal clerk, Walton, Ind.

John Lennon, mail wagon driver, Lafayette.

Charles Cahill, moulder, Indianapolis.

Charles Meyers, baggage handler, Lafayette.

Otto Geraldson, theatrical agent, Chicago.

THE INJURED.

Charles House, Lafayette, right leg broken; William Glace, Frankfort, Ind., head cut; Spens Berghaus, Milwaukee, head and arms cut; Jefferson Reese, Kempton, Ind., fatally crushed; Richard Johns, Pontiac, bruised; Lewis Leffler, Fowler, badly bruised, J. N. Vockery, Cincinnati, postal clerk, spinal injuries; C. W. Carnahan, Oxford, Ohio, postal clerk, internal injuries; Harry Elder, Cincinnati, C. A. Wissal, Shelbyville, Ind.; T. A. Wetheler, Sunman, Ind., postal clerk, slightly bruised.

The train was No. 12, and the accident was caused by the failure of the air brakes. The train entered the city limits at the rate of fifty miles an hour and when the usual distance from the station Engineer Walsh applied the brakes, but they refused to work and the train dashed on. When it reached a sharp curve near the depot building, the engine left the track dragging with it the baggage, postal and express cars. The engine was dashed to pieces, the baggage car reduced to splinters and the mail car overturned. The trucks of the first passenger coach were dragged out and the left rear side of the coach was knocked into fragments. The crash tore away the covered portion of the platform, extinguishing the lights. The police force and the fire department were called and the work of removing the dead and wounded from the wreckage was soon accomplished. The dead were taken in charge by Lafayette undertakers, while a corps of physicians looked after the wounded. The property loss to the Big Four company will amount to over $50,000.

A RAILROAD KING.

One of the wealthiest railway men of the country is James J. Hill, of St. Paul, Minn., and he accumulated his own wealth, not receiving a dollar from a deceased relative. Mr. Hill went to St. Paul in 1856 on a railroad ticket which he bought with borrowed money and began life as a clerk on the levee. He soon saw that the transportation problem was to be the great one of the future, and began to study it. Mr. Hill began his Great Northern system by buying the old St. Paul and Pacific, which represented a few miles of track and was sold for a song. He tore up the track and reduced the grades until one locomotive could do the work of three, and then gradually extended his lines into the great Red River valley. He foresaw that this was to be the great wheat field of the country, and he gridironed it with railroads. Then, when the extension of the Canadian Pacific eastward threatened to cut off his revenue from the west, he planned the Great Northern railway system or trunk line, which was completed a few days ago. Mr. Hill went over every mile of this line on foot and horseback, and knows every foot of its 3,000 miles of main track.

Mr. Hill's corporation also owns six big steamers on the great lakes, which carry its freight from Duluth to Buffalo in four days. Two passenger steamers are now under construction, which will make better speed than the fastest Atlantic ships, making the distance between Buffalo and Duluth in fifty-four hours. Mr. Hill's wealth is estimated at $25,000,000, and his mansion in St. Paul is pronounced by George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, the finest private house in the United States. Mr. Hill has not been a wrecker of railroads, but a builder of states. His enterprise has opened up great tracts of new and unknown country to settlement. His great line has been built in six years. And so little noise has been made about it that many people of the United States do not know even of its existence. But he has an army of 10,000 men working right along, day after day, laying down this wonderful system. Though not yet as rich as Gould, he will leave a more honorable fame, for he has preferred the building of his own system to the seizure of railways that have been built with the capital and energy of other men.

MEETING OF THE O. R. C.'S AT TOLEDO.

Quite a number of Fort Wayne railway conductors will visit Toledo this week and attend the annual convention of the Order of Railway Conductors of America, which will be in session in that city. Grand Chief Conductor E. E. Clark and several other grand officers are already in Toledo, and about 600 delegates, including 150 from the Ladies' auxiliary, will be in attendance. The opening meeting will be held at the Peoples theater tomorrow morning, at which time Governor McKinley will welcome the conductors on the part of the state. The citizens of Toledo, with the Ohio Yacht club, have arranged some form of entertainment for every moment. There will be a grand ball, numerous receptions, side trips to points of interest and an entertainment, lantern parade and fireworks at the Summer club house of the Ohio Yacht club at Presque Isle.

SIN OF DRUNKENNESS.

Address Delivered by H. C. Schraeder Sunday Afternoon.

The services at the city department of the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon were led by Mr. H. C. Schraeder, who delivered an interesting address on the sin of drunkenness. It was contended by some, Mr. Schrader said, that drunkenness was a disease but he did not believe it was. It is a sin and is condemned by God and the Bible in the most emphatic manner. It is today the curse of the nation and is doing more to uproot our institutions and our happiness than any other cause. Mr. Schraeder gave statistics showing that 80 per cent of the arrests made in this country were due to intoxicating drinks. Prohibition is the only remedy for its evils. He did not believe in any compromise with the rum traffic and opposed both high license and low license. Strike at the root of the evil and prohibit the sale and manufacture of the poison. At the close of his address several others spoke on the subject and the meeting proved to be very interesting.

THE POSITION OF SHERIFF.

Some Very Good People Have Held This Office, the President Says.

When United States Marshal Hawkins was in Washington looking after his candidacy for the office which he secured, says the Indianapolis News, a congressman told him of an applicant for office he had a funny experience with. The candidate, who was a deserving man, had fixed his eye upon the postmastership of a large southern city, and, in spite of the fact that he was a poor man, would not listen to suggestions of a consular appointment that was more profitable. One day he went with his congressman to visit the president and settle the question. Mr. Cleveland protested that he had provided for all the offices except that of United States marshal for the district, which was the best paying one in his gift. "Now," said the president, "if you will take that office, I will send in your name at once."

The candidate protested that he would take anything else first. Mr. Cleveland explained that the office was worth more than any other which he had sought, but still the candidate declined it.

"Well, why do you not want it," asked Mr. Cleveland.

"Well, it's purely sentiment, but I hate the office," replied the candidate. "It's too much like the sheriff."

"Hold on," said Mr. Cleveland, putting his hand on the candidate's shoulder, "some very good people have been county sheriffs."

Y. M. C. A. CONVENTION.

The International Gathering Held at Indianapolis This Week.

The thirteenth international convention of the Young Men's Christian association of North America, which takes place at Indianapolis this week, will be one of the largest gatherings of association men in the world, and will represent large interests. There are 1,400 associations in America at the present time, and the delegates who assemble there in convention will be representative of the whole. The property of the association in America is valued at $14,000,000, all of which is devoted entirely to association work. The magnitude of the work may be imagined from the fact that over 1,200 paid officials are necessary to conduct it.

The importance of the association as a factor in the civilization of the world has been recognized by business men in every city of the union and an evidence of the interest they feel in the success of the association is their large attendance at their coming convention. The purpose of the coming convention is to discuss the many departments of association work, to act upon the biennial report of the international committee, and to offer an opportunity for the exchange of ideas regarding the progress of the work. The convention will be called to order by T. S. McPheters, of St. Louis, at 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning at Roberts Park church, and it will continue until Sunday night, when it holds a farewell meeting in Tomlinson hall.

"OLD BOB" IS DEAD

The Only Convict on Record Who Refused a Pardon.

Old Bob Robinson, the pioneer convict at the northern penitentiary, died at that place on Saturday evening last at the advanced age of seventy years. He was a historic character. He was one of the convicts who labored to build the penitentiary. He was convicted in 1857 of the crime of murder and sentenced to a term of years in the Southern penitentiary. He was afterward transferred to Michigan City. He was tendered a pardon by Governor Williams but preferred prison confinement rather than liberty. He expressed a wish that he might die in prison. That preference was gratified. Robinson was a familiar figure to all visitors at the prison and The Sentinel reporter remembers him well when visiting the penitentiary, with Attorney E. V. Emrick about a year ago, he had a talk with the noted prisoner. He was a trusty, free to come and go as he willed. The Northern Indiana penitentiary has lost much of its interest by the death of "Old Bob."

REDUCING WAGES.

Carnegie Makes a Cut of Twenty Per Cent.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 8.—The workmen at the Duquesne works of the Carnegie Steel company confirm the report current that a cut in wages has been made in certain departments of the works. All of the furnace men, numbering about 350, have had notice that a 20 per cent. reduction of present rates will take effect next Monday. Another important new departure at the works will depend upon the result of tests to be made tomorrow of the new process of hydraulic strippers in the manufacture of billets. If these trials prove successful as anticipated the new methods will retire about 100 men.
